Poems, by Alan Seeger

People have long been asking, "Why are none of Alan Seeger's poems published in book form?" and that especially since the appearance in magazines of some of those he wrote in the trenches with the Foreign Legion: "Champagne, 1915," and "I Have a Rendezvous with Death," for instance. He collected some in a manuscript which he left in Bruges at a printer's when the German invasion swept over Belgium. He went to enlist for France and this volume, now published so soon after his death in the Somme drive, contains those as well as the ones inspired by the war.

The Pangerman Plot Unmasked, by André Chéradame.

With an Introduction by LORD CROMER.

This book deals with a phase of the war hitherto untouched—the peace phase. It purports to reveal "Berlin's Formidable Peace-Trap of the Drawn Game"—an astounding theory advanced by André Chéradame and indorsed in an introduction by Lord Cromer. M. Chéradame, like Lord Roberts, was a "Cassandra"—he prophesied what has come, in writings, journalistic and otherwise, with an energy of expression and a brilliance of thought that put him in the forefront of political writers long ago.

A Man's Book in a Man's Language

Football Days

By "Big Bill" Edwards

1300 football heroes live again in this joyous book for red-blooded men.

500 pages chockfull of intense, vivid, human stuff—incident and anecdote never before told as they are here.

56 pages of wonderful illustrations, most of them hitherto unpublished, which alone are worth the price of the book.

Newspapermen, sporting editors, friends the world over, co-operate gladly to give "Big Bill's" book the sort of publicity that will put it over the line—publicity that is the best of all because it can't be bought.

Never was such a book conceived for Christmas giving—to men! It is the one book of the season, absolutely the one, bar none, that the Man or the Boy will take to his heart and pore over all winter long. The stuff is in it and will keep him busy.

To the Trade:

Once in a while an artist comes along of such powerful genius that he dominates the imagination of his period. During the last century, Kate Greenaway and Walter Crane exercised a profound influence. Then came Maxfield Parrish, Dulac, Arthur Rackham and Bakst. And this year the little group has been joined by Willy Pogany, the brilliant Hungarian artist now living in America.

Ordinarily, such artists as these illustrate only classics that have already appeared in many editions. For this reason we are particularly glad to be able to announce that we have secured Mr. Pogany as illustrator for two of our most important new juveniles—"Stories to Tell the Littlest Ones," by Sara Cone Bryant, and "Bible Stories to Read and Tell," by Frances Jenkins Olcott. These are books that would be notable even without the illustrations, as the authors are recognized as the two leading authorities in the field of children's literature. With the illustrations they will stand alone among holiday volumes.

Pogany books make ideal gifts, and we hope that book-sellers will take advantage of popular interest in the artist to feature them.

John Busyman Reviews a Book*

MY name is John Busyman. I'm a broker, office 66 Short Street. I haven't read a book in twenty years—until the other day—too busy. It was an accident, you may be sure. My Packard was engaged. Mrs. Busyman had to have it. No matter how much it inconvenienced me, she had to have it. Result: I had to go down-town in a crowded street car. Luckily I got a seat. Another fellow and I had a race for it, but I beat him.

Then I found that I had left my paper at home, worse luck. My foot kicked against something on the floor. It was a book, a small book. I picked it up. The name of it was Making Happiness Epidemic. It was written by a chap named William Vernon Backus. Never heard of him. Anyway if all books have as little nonsense in them as this one, a fellow could afford to waste an hour on one once a month or so. The author said that a conductor's wife had a row with him one morning. That made the conductor mad. He got impudent to a passenger and the passenger got all riled up, and when he got to his office he called down his stenographer for nothing.

That noon the stenographer and her chum had a row, and so the thing went on, being passed along. I know just how it is. When Mrs. Busyman upsets me by taking the Packard, or if my coffee's too strong or the paper doesn't come, the whole day goes against me.

Then this fellow, Backus, said that whenever a clerk or a conductor or any employe was impudent or didn't do his work right, he'd report him, get him called down or fired. His motto was only the fellow has got any rights who insists on them. I could sympathize with him. I've felt like giving a lot of them black eyes myself. Would have done it, too, only I didn't want to read in the paper—

JOHN BUSYMAN IN STREET ROW.

Well-known men have to be mighty careful. Everybody knows everything they do.

But after a while, this Backus saw that reporting rude fellows didn't get him anywhere. So he changed his tactics and reported everybody who acted decent! Funny idea, I thought at first. One conductor saw him taking down his number.

"What are you going to report me for?" he asked.

"For being polite," Backus told him.

Backus goes on to explain that we ought to appreciate what people are trying to do, instead of bothering to call down the other fellow. He's more than half right. I've always felt I haven't been appreciated, for instance. Mrs. Busyman never did have me sized up right. To her, I'm just the machine that pays bills. Maybe it's my own fault.

I admit I've been a bit snappy down to the office, called down the stenographer about every little thing and all the time I knew I was blame lucky that I was my own boss and so no one could call me down for my bone-head plays. Well, that morning, I said please when I asked her to take some letters and I said "Please have them ready as soon as possible," instead of "Don't you leave for lunch until you've got through the whole batch." Her batting average on those letters was way up.

I tried that appreciation stuff on Winkle, the broker across the hall. He said, "Come on, now, Busyman, what's the idea. What are you trying to put over on me?" And that shows that I wasn't appreciated. But I ordered six copies of the book and sent one of them over to Winkle, and maybe he'll quit wanting his telephone operator fired every time he gives her the wrong number.

As I said in the beginning, I'm no hand for books, and maybe I never will be, but I'm glad I did read that book, because the fellow who wrote it has got the right idea, and if you don't believe what I'm telling you, you can ask my stenographer, who is taking down this letter. I thought I'd write down these few ideas and send them to the publishers of the book. First letter I've written in twenty years that I didn't write expecting it would bring me business.

If you haven't got the price of the book let me know. That's all.

Yours,

JOHN BUSYMAN.

P. S. (by the stenographer).—Mr. B. is just lovely now. I hope he doesn't forget that book. I wonder if he appreciates me enough to give me a raise.

ENGLAND

ITS POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

and DEVELOPMENT and

THE WAR AGAINST GERMANY

by

EDUARD MEYER, Ph.D., LL.D.

Professor of History at the University of Berlin Exchange Professor to Harvard University, 1909-10

PROFESSOR MEYER, the successor of Mommsen at the University of Berlin, is well known to academic circles in this country as the world authority on ancient history and its forms of government.

In his work on England he sets forth clearly and concisely the fundamental differences between English and German institutions as well as between the aspirations of the two nations as a whole. He arrives at the conclusion that the ideals of Modern England, as this war has revealed them, are unalterably opposed to all that Germans hold most dear. He does not say, however, that England should abandon her ideals and follow those of Germany, on that point he differs from his English opponents who otherwise have reached the same conclusion.

Meyer is distinctly a man of the people and on all essential points his work may be considered representative of the popular German reaction on English institutions and ideals.

This book was not intended for the American market, but as there seems to be a constantly growing desire everywhere to understand Germany, we believe that the American edition will strongly appeal to a large public as an indirect means to that end.

WHEN BOOKS ARE ECONOMIC GRAFTERS

THE paper on "The Small Town Bookstore," read recently before the Keystone State Library Association by Mr. Mumford of the Penn Publishing Company and reprinted last week in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, arouses several quite diverse trains of thought. In touching on the "small town" situation Mr. Mumford simply attacked his problem where it was most acute: the troubles of the large city and small city bookseller differ in degree, not in kind.

It is no news to the trade, of course, to be told that bookselling in American small towns is moribund, if not dead. And the same causes that killed it there have been actively at work in the larger cities. The trade, it is true, has turned the corner toward recovery, but convalescence threatens to be protracted—indeed possible relapses are "indicated"—if more radical remedies are not applied.

Should the manufacturers of automobiles, watches, or hosiery see any such wholesale mortality on the retail side as the book-trade has witnessed in the last twenty years, we venture that they would not feel satisfied to place the entire responsibility for the catastrophe upon their retailers. We believe that, no matter how much they might deplore the inefficiency of their retail outlets, no matter what far-sighted and praiseworthy co-operative efforts they might make to decrease that inefficiency, they would also at the same time submit to a serious searching of heart to see if they were not themselves, in some degree at least, at fault, to see if possibly there might not be something radically wrong either with their product or its price.

Grant the appalling handicap of inadequate distribution under which the book publisher alone suffers among all the manufacturers of lines of major importance in this country; grant the amazingly powerful and pervasive competitors of books for men's time and money that have sprung up in the last decade; grant, even, if you will, the ineffective, unsystematic, uninspired selling methods of only too many booksellers—yet, YET, do the publishers come into their court of equity with entirely spotless hands? Are there no abuses which they might themselves eliminate, but have not? Are books on the strongest economic competitive basis in the open market? Do publishers always give value received and never succumb to the temptation of killing the goose—?

"The publishers are not fair to us," said a well-known Philadelphia bookseller recently to the writer, "when they turn out an article like this"—picking up a book almost at random from a table—"and ask us to sell it at that price." Does one large New York bookseller strike at one root of our trouble when he says: "I feel as if I were going down into my customers' pockets and taking money that doesn't belong to me when I charge more than a dollar for a lot of this fiction"? Of course, there is no dodging the competition of automobiles, the "movies," and other attractions today as deterrents to bookbuying, but we are inclined to sympathize with this claim of the booksellers: that a great many books are not inherently worth the price put on them, and that this in consequence tends to give not only these books (which are really only a small proportion of the whole) but to a certain extent all books the appearance of being "economic grafters." What society is willing to pay for a book is always the "marginal cost" to it of this book, to use an economic term, "marginal cost" being the final sacrifice which society is willing to incur for a book as compared with other things. When a real dollar's worth of book costs—as it does in some cases—$1.25 or $1.35 and a dollar's worth of Ford car, moving pictures or Saturday Evening Post costs certainly not over a dollar, it is obvious that many books do not have even a "scratch" start in the competition for the consumer's money!

This situation is aggravated by recent extensive price increases, increases which will probably be permanent in many cases rather than merely temporary. These increases have, to be sure, come as a direct result of rising manufacturing costs, and are in most cases entirely justified and indeed absolutely necessary; yet in other cases adherence to an artificial retail price based upon inadequate value given, or upon a cost derived from extravagant methods of publishing which really merely skim the cream of each book's sales, rather than upon the marginal value of books to their ultimate purchasers, is both a quick and sure way to put books in the class of luxuries—if indeed 90 per cent. of the people do not already regard them as such.

"What we need is wider circulation for the individual worth-while book," said a publisher. "The book business breaks down on account of faulty distributive means; and if we could only get the small town dealers busy we might increase sales and distribute the initial publishing costs to such an extent that we could afford to reduce the price to the consumer." But this argument overlooks the prime consideration in the building up of any retail distribution system: that it must be made worth the dealer's while to carry a line. Suppose the circulation manager of a periodical were to say: "If we could only get every newsstand to carry our magazine we might in time get a large enough circulation to enable us to bring the price down to a point at which enough people would buy it to make it worth every newsdealer's while to carry it." A nice little circle of reasoning—but obviously it does not get anywhere!

Would not the quickest way to remedy the situation be ruthlessly to weed out the most glaring "economic grafters"? Make it impossible for a retailer to have to admit, as one did to the writer recently: "I was ashamed of my profession the other day when a good customer of mine who had purchased a $1.35 novel came in and confronted me with the same story complete in one issue of a 15-cent periodical." It may prove to be good business as well as good morals to tell the dealer—and even the public!—when a certain book is an "author's book"; and it certainly is good business not to publish an "author's book" at all if it isn't honestly worth while. It is the "hashed up" and rankly ephemeral book, non-fiction as well as fiction, that drags books into direct and at present hopeless competition with our "subsidized" periodicals. The elimination of the book of this type would probably strengthen the fibre of the entire book trade.

The shrewd merchant does not commit the folly of getting the biggest profits his public will stand.—Hodgkin's "Successful Storekeeping."

MORE PUBLISHERS INCREASE PRICES

THREE more publishers have announced increases in the retail price of books on their lists. The most sweeping of these price revisions is announced by Harper & Brothers to go into effect on December first. A thirty-six page catalog now being sent out to the retail trade lists changes in approximately fifteen hundred of the three thousand actual titles in print in the Harper list. Judging from one hundred titles on three pages of the catalog, two-thirds of these changes are from "regular" to "net," the price remaining the same; while in about ten per cent. of the titles there is a price increase (chiefly five or ten cents on $1.30 to $1.35 fiction), and in about 25 per cent. the new "net" price shows a decrease in comparison with the old "regular" price (the most common reduction being that of $1.50 "regular" fiction to $1.40 "net").

Of the other two publishers announcing changes, Sully & Kleinteich will shortly raise prices on about 25 per cent. of their list and Charles Scribner's Sons is sending out increases on the following works: "American History Series"; "General History of Art"; "The Great Educators"; Ibsen, cloth; Kent, "The Historical Bible," vols. I-IV; Meredith, pocket ed., cloth; "Music Lover's Library"; Poe, pocket ed., cloth; Stevenson, Biographical ed., cloth.

LITTLE & IVES BUY G. W. DILLINGHAM CO.

G. W. DILLINGHAM Co. were sold November 2, as a going concern to the J. J. Little & Ives Co., of New York City, secured creditors, for $41,427. The sale will net the creditors 25 cents on the dollar, it is stated. In the schedules filed on Wednesday the liabilities of the company were placed at $112,051 and the assets $18,696.

The petition in bankruptcy was filed on Aug. 30 last by the attorney for three small creditors. The Little & Ives Co., which held notes against the publishing concern for $30,000 did not appear in that proceeding. Raymond D. Little and Arthur W. Little have been respectively vice-president and treasurer of G. W. Dillingham Co. since early in 1915.

HENRY HOLT & CO. TO MOVE

The entire twelfth floor has been leased, for altho a section of the floor will for the present be sub-let, it was thought advisable to provide for the future expansion of the rapidly growing business. The stock rooms will remain for the present at the old location at 34 West 33d Street.

Henry Holt & Co. ask the retail trade to make note of the removal, for altho the firm has been at its present 33d Street location for nine years, there is still occasional confusion because of orders being sent to the old 23d Street address.

NEW YORK BOOKSELLERS' SCHOOL BEGINS 1916-17 COURSE

BETWEEN sixty and seventy people attended the opening session of the New York Booksellers' School at the West Side Y. M. C. A. on October 27. About thirty have enrolled for the course and it is hoped that this number will be augmented by further enrollments during the next week or two.

The opening session was devoted to a survey of bookselling in general and of the work which the course aims to do. Dr. Walter L. Hervey, chairman of the educational committee at the West Side Y. M. C. A., presided, and the speakers were B. W. Huebsch, director of the School, Van Wyck Brooks and H. W. L. Dana, instructors in literature in the School, and J. B. Kerfoot, literary editor of Life.

Temple Scott, of Brentano's, will be the speaker at both the November 3 and 10 sessions. In the course in literature the School will take up American literature first, leaving older literatures until later in the course, a program which, while reversing the usual order of study, has its obvious advantages.

BEST-SELLING BOOKS

COMMUNICATIONS

BOOKSELLER AND LIBRARIAN PROTEST AGAINST WASTE IN PUBLISHERS' ADVERTISING

Paris, Texas, October 19, 1916.

Editor THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

In reply to yours of 16th in regard to Christmas Bookshelf, would hate to see this cut down in any particular.

If I may make a suggestion, will state that the publishers waste a great deal of their advertising by sending out so many little circulars individually. These almost always reach the waste basket, as they are not in such form as to be filed away and as most of us are too busy at the book buying season to stop and read them.

Co-operative advertising is what we need and that is what you are giving us, so I am for the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. I make up practically all my orders from the WEEKLY.

ALEXANDER BOOK COMPANY.

(D. B. Alexander.)

Waltham, Mass., Oct. 20, 1916.

Editor THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY:

I estimate that I fill each day a round waste-basket 20 inches high by 16 inches wide full of advertising circulars from publishers! If these circulars had served any good purpose before their consignment to the basket, I should not be writing this letter.

Every library is interested in any books of interest to its community, but every community has different interests. After examining such a co-operative list as the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY's, the librarian may then request from the publishers all advertising matter along certain lines or on certain titles. Every librarian is obliged to save as much time as possible, and one of the best ways to do it is to examine only one list of books. It may be that the publishers do not yet realize that few libraries could buy everything published, even if the books found users. Even after finding out what books are on the market, then the librarian and trustee must put in many hours reading book reviews, lists like the A. L. A. Booklist, or the books themselves.

The cut in time which the librarian or trustee is likely to make is somewhat after the following plan: There are two or three publishers who send careful selections of advertising matter to libraries; every librarian soon learns who they are and carefully examines their circulars. There are about a half dozen publishers who wisely ask libraries if circulars will be welcome in quantity or otherwise; I believe all librarians feel more kindly to them for their courtesy. There are also a few extensive advertisements, usually in pamphlet form, for large sets which every library is glad to get. All other circulars go into the waste basket practically as soon as removed from the envelopes, without examination. This may seem like severe treatment, but it is a necessity. About 95 per cent. is thus useless because the librarian is obliged to get his information from a single time-saving list.

It seems to me that if publishers understood the situation they would be glad to make the saving that would result from omitting public libraries from their circular lists. At least they would not send libraries the same dilute material sent to the public. The several pounds of paper, in the aggregate, wasted on each library, would amount to no small total when multiplied by the thousands of libraries in the country.

At present the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY presents the best link between the publishers and the libraries, as far as immediate knowledge of new books is concerned.

ORLANDO C. DAVIS, Librarian,
Waltham Public Library.

PERIODICAL NOTES

Graphic Arts, Boston, has discontinued publication.

The American Sunday Monthly Magazine will be combined with Hearst's Magazine beginning with the January issue.

The Outlook will appear in enlarged form, beginning with the first issue of 1917. The size of the page will be 9 x 12 inches.

Saucy Stories, another 15-cent all-story magazine, is the latest addition to the "S. S." "bunch" of periodicals.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES

J. B. KERFOOT, the literary critic of Life, will give the first of his lectures for the Lord and Taylor Book Shop in Chickering Hall on Election Day, at three P. M. This lecture was postponed from last week on account of Mr. Kerfoot's illness. Joyce Kilmer lectured in Mr. Kerfoot's place.

TWO NOTABLE COLLECTIONS OF CARTOONS will be issued in book form early this month:

"Raemaekers' Cartoons" (Doubleday, Page), 105 war drawings by the great Dutch artist, with accompanying notes by Chesterton, Belloc, Phillpotts, and many other notables; and "One Hundred Cartoons by Cesare" (Small, Maynard), a splendid selection of the work of the man who is perhaps America's foremost cartoonist. Both books will make capital Christmas gifts, especially for men.

THE MEETING between representatives of Canadian newspaper publishers and paper manufacturers over the contract price of news print for next year did not result in a definite understanding. The manufacturers have intimated that they cannot supply paper at less than three cents a pound and the publishers have appealed to the government for support in opposing this heavy charge. Another meeting will be held in ten days, and the government has indicated that it will step in unless the rate is lowered.

DODD, MEAD & Co. published on October 28: "The Old Blood," a romance of the war by Frederick Palmer; "We Discover the Old Dominion," by Louise Closser Hale, illustrated by Walter Hale, the story of another of the Hales' chatty motor trips; "The New York of the Novelists," by Arthur Bartlett Maurice, editor of The Bookman; "Memories of the Fatherland," by Anne Topham, author of "Memories of the Kaiser's Court"; Jessie Willcox Smith's splendid edition of Kingsley's "Water Babies," and "The Understanding Hills," lyrical interpretation of nature, by Livingston L. Biddle.

NO PUBLISHER has brought out a better line of eye-witness stories of the great war than have the Houghton Mifflin Co. Beginning with "The First Hundred Thousand," "Kitchener's Mob," and "A Soldier of the Legion," the list has recently been augmented by "Friends of France," and within the past week have come two more excellent first-hand stories: "A Volunteer Poilu," by Henry Sheahan, which is said to do for the French army what "The First Hundred Thousand" and "Kitchener's Mob" did for the British; and "Ambulance Number 10," a series of letters by Leslie Buswell, of which President Lowell, of Harvard, says: "It has impressed me more than anything else from the front that I have seen."

"THE HUNGRY STONES, AND OTHER STORIES," a volume of some of the more notable of Tagore's short stories, was published this week by Macmillan. Ernest Rhys, in his biography of Tagore, devotes much space to a consideration of him as a short-story writer, advancing the opinion that this particular form of literature is one of the most important expressions of Tagore's genius. Now for the first time English readers are given the opportunity of acquainting themselves with this new Tagore and of forming their own estimate of him. None of the material in this volume has ever appeared before in English. The volume is illustrated with the work of native Indian artists.

WHAT GERMANY THINKS OF ENGLAND is set forth in "England: its political organization and development and the war against Germany," published by Ritter & Co., of Boston. The author, Edward Meyer, is Mommsen's successor in the chair of history at the University of Berlin and was exchange professor to Harvard in 1909-10. The book was finished about the middle of January of the present year and has just been translated into English. It surveys the English Constitution, the English idea of the state, the army, education, social reform, Ireland, free trade, internal and external expansion, beginning and conduct of the war—all from the German viewpoint.

AMONG THE NEW JUVENILES published this fall by Hurst & Co. are: "Rex Kingdon Behind the Bat" in the Rex Kingdon Series, by Gordon Braddock; "Vacation with the Tucker Twins" in the Tucker Twins Books, by Nell Speed; "Molly Brown's Orchard Home" in the Molly Brown Series, by Nell Speed; "Through the Yellowstone with Paul and Peggy" in the Paul and Peggy Books, by Florence E. Scott; "The Ocean Wireless Boys on the Pacific" in the Ocean Wireless Series, by Capt. Wilbur Lawton; "The Boy Aviators with the Air Raiders" in the Boy Aviators' Series, also by Capt. Lawton. and "The Motor Maids at Sunrise Camp" in the Motor Maids Series, by Katherine Stokes.

"BIG BILL" EDWARDS of Princeton isn't just a man, he is an institution, familiar to two generations of football enthusiasts. What he doesn't know about football—well, it wouldn't even do to make up a publisher's blurb! Into his new book, "Football Days," immediately forthcoming from Moffat, Yard & Co., he has crowded incidents and anecdotes, as well as a wealth of illustrations, of football players and teams dating all the way from the "dark ages" away back beyond John DeWitt, when football players wore moustaches, down to the days of "Hobey" Baker and "Charlie" Brickley. The book will be out in plenty of time to catch the crest of the football craze around "big-game" time—and then, of course, there is Christmas.

THE LATEST ADDITION to the Bobbs-Merrill series on great authors and how to know them will be "Stevenson, How to Know Him," by Richard Ashley Rice, professor of English Literature at Smith College. Professor Rice has caught the charm of Stevenson, and in such chapters as Child's Play, Literature and the Family Profession, Ordered South, Vagabondage and Craftsmanship, The First Great Adventure, The Mirror of the South Seas and Looking Down from the Mill, he has made an appeal which will impress not only those who are casting about for the really worth-while books of to-day, but equally that host of admirers who read everything by or about one of the most beloved of English authors. The Stevenson volume will appear about November 15.

A VOLUME OF poems by Alan Seeger, a young American graduate of Harvard who served in the Foreign Legion from the beginning of the war until the time of his death only a few days ago in the present Allied drive, has just been published by Charles Scribner's Sons. It contains that prophetic poem written last winter called "I have a rendezvous with Death" as well as "Champagne, 1915," which attracted so much attention when published in the North American Review a year ago. William Archer, a friend of the poet from his early youth, has written an introduction to the volume which expresses his literary appreciation of America's contribution to the great tragedy of the war as it has affected men of letters.

BERNARD SHAW, a puzzling delight to many and a horror to others, is made clear and commendable in a common-sense manual by Richard Burton, ex-president of the Drama League of America, in "Bernard Shaw: The Man and the Mask," which the Holts published on November 2. Dr. Burton, while conceding his idol's occasional lapses from good taste and from due consideration for the feelings of others, shows him as not only vastly amusing, but at bottom a big-hearted, thoughtful altruist. He says Shaw "has, by his own confession, put on the garb of the mountebank and attracted wide public attention thereby; his purpose in doing so is not self-advertisement, tho the reverse is often assumed, but rather the more general hearing this secures for his views." A valuable feature of the book is the analysis of each play (Shaw's non-dramatic work is not considered) in chronological order.

Bell, J: Joy. Cupid in oilskins. N. Y. and Chic., Revell. c. 187 p. D $1 n.

Romance of war time in an English seaport town. The young men of the patrol boat Lapwing, when in port, were always glad to be invited to the supper-table of Mr. Thomas Buckle. His niece, Lydia, the girl with a beautiful plait of hair, was the lodestone which drew them. When Charlie Moore, one of the Smitten, was presented with a lock of the beautiful hair, he was so inspired that he became a hero in the sinking of a U-boat. Lydia, on hearing her part in the affair, readily came to terms.

Clemens, S: Langhorne [Mark Twain, pseud.].

The mysterious stranger; a romance; with il. [in col.] by N. C. Wyeth. N. Y., Harper. c. 150 p. pls. O $2 n.

Three Austrian boys, in 1590, meet a mysterious stranger, who calls himself an angel, yet is named Satan. He is a fascinating companion, performing miracles that charm the boys, but they soon find out that he has no Moral Sense. In fact, he scorns Moral Sense, as the thing that gives the Human Race its finishing touch of obnoxiousness. The lives of the villagers are turned from their predestined paths by his casual interference. He is willing to do a person a good turn, since it costs him nothing, but in several cases his kindness consists in bringing about the early death of his beneficiaries. And such acts he justifies. In spite of its many touches of humor and its plea for laughter as the world's greatest weapon, the book closes with an overwhelming exhortation of mankind and an abysmal picture of the futility of life.

No vision is so splendid, no disappointment so black as that which comes to Judith and Neil in the full tide of their youth. The obstructions to the course of true love grow at last unbearable, and they steal away at night to escape the fate that parents and social inequalities have hung about their necks. But it is when the truth comes to them that their fate is literally hung about their necks and that they carry it with them, eloping or remaining, that the stuff they are both made of comes to the top.

Harris, Corra May White [Mrs. Lundy Howard Harris]. A circuit rider's widow; il. by Wa. H. Everett. Garden City, N. Y., Doubleday, Page. c. 374 p. pls. D $1.50 n.

As a circuit rider's widow, Mary Thompson continued to be the guide, mother, philosopher and friend to the whole community. She was a very human saint, with a strong sense of humor, one who longed to see a horserace! As we follow her round the country, we meet the spinster who cultivated a jasmine bush for flowers for funerals, the divorced woman with a fine voice and a charming presence, who turned the choir upside down, and the old preacher who saw in Mary's speculations as to her origin nothing but a belief in the transmigration of souls.

Henham, Ernest G: [John Trevena, pseud.] A Drake by George! N. Y., A. A. Knopf. c. 373 p. D $1.50 n.

Captain Drake, retired, came to live at Windham House, Highfield, where he bluffed himself into the dictatorship of the Devonshire village. After his death, George, his nephew, whose aim in life had been to avoid work, tried to hold his uncle's position. He made extravagant promises to the villagers of a railroad to be built with his own money, and other improvements which never materialized. He stole his aunt's furniture and sold it at auction. Finally, George was forced to flee. Later, when he attempted to sell the house, he discovered it had been gradually demolished by the villagers.

Located in Ohio, story tells of actual occurrences of the last century, and represents primitive, pioneer society, which fought for its opinions, religious or political. Follows the rise, career, and downfall of a religious impostor who gives himself out as God. Set over against the "god" is Squire Braile, a philosopher, and mocker. Around these the tragic-comedy plays itself out, involving in its course the entire settlement, especially the "god's" heroic wife, and an intense, red-haired girl, almost ferocious in her emotions.

Why Speculate

On Book-Binding Material
When by Specifying

as your standard book-binding material you are assured of getting the best binding for all classes of books.

Book-Finish Fabrikoid is the successful result of expert experience and determination of a practical book-binder to give it the same superiority that distinguishes all Du Pont products.

Book-Finish Fabrikoid has the popular grain finish of leather, the colors which good taste and service demand, is immune from insect attacks, and is

Impervious to Dampness and Climatic Changes

Book-Finish Fabrikoid cuts, pastes, binds, stamps and cases same as leather. Every inch is uniform in texture, no defective, imperfect sections as frequently appears in leather. Leading binderies have adopted Book-Finish Fabrikoid and after thorough tests pronounce it far superior to much of the leather now available.

Popularize your bindings, improve your production. Make your standard Book-Finish Fabrikoid—the superior leather substitute for book-binding.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in OCTOBER, 1916

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas. W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 40, 80, 120, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

There Are Different Ways of Getting New Customers

A great majority of our customers come to us through the recommendations of those whose work we have handled to their satisfaction. The following is from the publisher of a recent book:

"The book is well printed and nicely bound, and is a credit to the Vail-Ballou Co."

We believe that no concern possesses an asset that is comparable in value with a long list of satisfied customers.

FLEXIBLE CLOTH and LEATHER

Work is a specialty with us. Catalogues, bibles, prayer books, hymn books, pocket memorandum and other volumes, either India or heavier papers are handled with equal facility.

WE ARE EXPERTS ON INDIA BIBLE PAPERS.

BROUSSARD LIFTED GAMECHICK BY THE BRIDLE AND THE NEXT MOMENT
CLEARED BOTH MARE AND GIRL

A straightaway army love story, with the scene laid at a post in the far Northwest, presenting all the dash of American Army life, and all the romance that results from an army captain falling in love with a bewitching Virginia girl, is the new story by the popular Miss Seawell. It is realistic in that it conveys entrancingly the spirit of the army—but it is also light—as light as the heroine's laugh and as snappy as her black eyes. The delightfully dainty gift-book style of the make-up, combined with the cheery and sweet tone, makes it a charming Christmas present.
